ABOUT MDP

The environment of business in the recent years has become more and more complex. In this situation of increased complexity, there has been a re-examination of the factors contributing to personal and managerial effectiveness. Increasingly, the older notion of intelligence and technical competence being the sole predictors of effectiveness is being contested. Some interesting new ideas in this regard are the concepts of Multiple Intelligence put forth by Howard Gardner and Emotional Intelligence popularized by Daniel Goleman. These broader forms of intelligence have been found to be useful in multitude of situations, including managerial jobs. Emotional Intelligence relates to - sensitivity to and management of self – in relationships.

Empirical evidence has suggested that emotionally intelligent people are more adept at handling diverse situations. Moreover, emotional intelligence at the workplace has been found to have positive impact on success in interpersonal relationships and performance within the organization. Given this interest in emotional intelligence and the wide spread recognition of its salience in enhancing managerial effectiveness, we decided to launch this programme which is in its fifteenth edition now.
